

1

Profile edit Friends Inbox

home account privacy logout

Search

Applications edit

Photos

Video

Groups

Events

Notes

 Check It Out

more

Tom Cruise's IQ is 124

Is Tom Cruise smarter than you? Find out now! 90% fail this quiz!

More Ads | Advertise

Update -- Notice to all Check It Out Users -- Effective Immediately

Back to Check It Out

Discussion Board

Topic View

Start New Topic

Topic: Update -- Notice to all Check It Out Users -- Effective Immediately

Reply to Topic

Displaying posts 31 - 42 out of 42 by 22 people.

Prev 1 2

Post #31

Aimee Jackson (Waco, TX) replied to Daniel's post

15 minutes ago

Reply to Aimee

Report

I like that hat! Now I refer to the people at Vryl as AZZHATS thanks to you!

Post #32

5 replies

Vm App (Silicon Valley, CA) replied to vm's post

14 minutes ago

Reply to vm

Report

UPDATE:

Let us state our position more clearly. If you printed a coupon from the application properly, and redeemed it properly and did not use copies or pdf prints, it is our policy to reimburse the store where you used the coupons. That said, it has been several days since the print limits set for the coupons were reached and we believe all coupons now in circulation are the result of invalid pdf prints or copies. Going forward, we are advising the stores not to accept them.

Post #33

1 reply

Aimee Jackson (Waco, TX) replied to vm's post

11 minutes ago

Reply to Aimee

Report

NOPE! I still have the majority I printed legitimatly, haven't been back to the store because of schedule. Planned on shopping this Friday, so are you saying I can or cannot use mine? Mine are legitimate, but havent been used, so I guess they're still in circulation? Will you please write a letter telling my Brookshire Brothers that I am not a thief??

Post #34

Jennifer Pilar replied to vm's post

9 minutes ago

Reply to Jennifer

Report

and then there are the people like me that did not use the q's until YOUR company ASSURED us that they were in fact legit and now we're just sol b/c we didn't jump and use them without verifying the validity?? No, you stated your position quite clearly. YOUR company did not properly do their job and are doing a very poor job of fixing YOUR mistake.

Post #35

Bianca Rios (George Mason) replied to vm's post

9 minutes ago

Reply to Bianca

Report

Good luck figuring out which coupons were printed legitimately and which were not.

Post #36

AJ Zhang (F & M) replied to vm's post

8 minutes ago

Reply to AJ

Report

SO as of Aug 19, they are legit(printed from site) and the store will be reimbursed. Tomorrow on, the stores will not be reimbursed. did i understand correctly?

Online Friends \(1\)

1

Bianca Rios (George Mason) replied to Aimee's post
7 minutes ago

Reply to Bianca
Report

Post #37
1 reply

I would love a letter also! I used a couple I had left at a local grocery store and they were hesitant about accepting the coupons because they have had trouble with internet printable fraudulent coupons in the past. If I could get a letter to give to them I would greatly appreciate it. I assured them that these coupons were real.

Stacey Trentham (Dallas / Fort Worth, TX) replied to Jean's post
7 minutes ago

Reply to Stacey
Report

Post #38

I too waited for confirmation that these were legitimate coupons, and then seeing that they were, directly from vycl marketing, I went and redeemed them. I printed them from the check it out page and felt reassured that the stores I redeemed them at would be reimbursed. I would like to know if in fact they will be reimbursed for coupons used up until your official statement that they no longer would be. I have wasted my time, printer ink, paper and worst of all have possibly damaged my reputation at the stores I shop at. I think you owe a big apology to everyone caught up in this mess and I think we all deserve assurances that the already redeemed coupons will be honored. I understand that mistakes happen, and you have to do something to stop the overuse of coupons that were meant for limited use. But please don't cop out and say that your system was hacked and the coupons are fraudulent. Admit your mistake in not putting safety measures in place, pay up for already redeemed coupons, and let retailers know that it was you, not innocent customers that are at fault for all of this.

Jean Parks replied to vm's post
4 minutes ago

Reply to Jean
Report

Post #39

I waited till this afternoon to use the coupons I printed on Friday, I waited till I saw the announcement from your company advising legit facebook users that we could shop with confidence. Now you're saying that because I didn't run right out to the stores like a crack addicted looter means my coupons are frauds?

Jean Parks replied to Bianca's post
2 minutes ago

Reply to Jean
Report

Post #40
1 reply

I'd love a letter advising my store that I didn't commit fraud and that they'll get paid the $43 dollars owed to them.

Sharon Valcarcel (North Jersey, NJ) wrote about a minute ago

Reply to Sharon
Report

Post #41

I think it's funny that the spokesperson for this company stated that the promotions were real just a few short days ago. Citing, why would his company fake offers, knowing that would cause them to upset people and lose any potential customers...

I printed out the entire page when I redeemed these coupons so I could show my stores EXACTLY where I had gotten them. I think THAT is a good way to know that the coupons I was using were completely legitimate!

Seriously, as a company we are bearing the cost of the discounts... Oh come on! What kind of shortsighted operation are you running? The MOMENT I read that I knew this was going to fall to pieces... Really, good job.. Did they teach you this in business school??

Way to alienate your target audience and piss off retailers... You've made legitimate couponing that much harder for us.

Hats off to you for such a colossal flub!

You replied to Jean's post
2 seconds ago

Reply to Your Post

Online Friends (1)

1

Post #42

I would like a letter as well. I didn't redeem any until it was verified they were legit. I printed from the main page on Friday.

What a mess. If it was there mission to make couponers look bad they did a good job of it with this fiasco.

Delete Post
Edit Post

Prev 1 2

